

Enclosure 1

Standard Specifications for Town Plans

(subject to availability of information and special focus desired)

Base Plate I (For more complex cities may be split into two plates):

1. Street pattern and street names, as complete as possible; street index included except for smaller cities.
2. House-numbering system at least one number per block.
3. External boundary of city (city limits), limits of built-up area.
4. Railroad lines, stations and stops. Identifying names included, index possibly required.
5. Large permanent buildings, monuments, stadiums, schools, and other outstanding orientation features. Identifying names included, index possibly required.
6. Bridges, identifying names included.
7. Marginal data: nestline, border, bar scale, numerical scale, title, legend, and indexes for data on this plate.

Base Plate II (For less complex cities may be combined with Plate I):

1. Rivers, creeks, canals, reservoirs, and other water areas delineated; those significant are named.
2. Marsh and swamp indicated.

Base Plate III:

1. Internal city boundaries, with names.
2. Militia or police districts, if any, with names or numbers

Overlay, Plate IV, with index key of items shown:

1. Military installations and airfields.
2. Industrial installations, including railroad yards and port facilities.

3. Public transportation: Buses and streetcars with route numbers and stops, taxi stands.
4. Hotels, restaurants, and theaters.
5. Post offices and telegraph offices.
6. Security installations: police, militia, and secret police headquarters and other installations.
7. Construction of major bridges -- wood, concrete, or steel.

Overlay, Plate V:

1. Parks.
2. Woodland.
3. Grassland.
4. Cropland.
5. Orchards.
6. Cemeteries.
7. Postal and election districts.

Overlay, Plate VI:

1. Electric power: lines, stations, power districts and control points.
2. Gas lines and installations.
3. Water supply facilities.
4. Telecommunications trunk lines and control stations.
5. Radio stations, transmitters, and connecting lines.